

Dig into authentic litti-chokha in the city

Remember the days when Chacha Chaudhary's comics, flavoursome regional delicacies and phantom cigarettes were our priorities in life? At Vatika Group's Nukkadwala restaurant, one can now time-travel to the decade we all wish to relive. The restaurant proudly represents India's newest chain of smart and stylish QSR (Quick Service Restaurant), offering authentic regional Indian food at their outlets in Delhi, Faridabad and Gurgaon.

After achieving the milestone of opening up 10 stores across Delhi NCR, they plan to expand in Dubai, New York and London soon. The ambience and décor reflects the culture of India, focussing on reliving childhood memories. The brand offers regional delights with its authentic flavours intact and serves it hygienically. Their customer service encompasses warmth and unrivalled Indian cuisine; savouring the fresh flavours of the handpicked dishes from the streets across the country. They have recently launched their new product — Bihar's authentic desi-ghee Litti & Chokha, a trademark dish of whole-wheat balls stuffed with sattu (spiced gram flour) with aubergine and potato mash. Rush to your nearest Nukkadwala to get your bite into this heavenly desi-ghee Litti & Chokha as it will be available only for a limited period of time.

"Nukkadwala began its journey in August 2015 with its first store in Vatika Business Park at Sohna Road. We travelled for two years to select popular Indian street food dishes that people connect with. We pledged to recreate them as authentically as is done in the street shops across India, which often evokes nostalgia," says Gaurav Bhalla, MD, Vatika. The restaurant aims to launch unique combos at pocket-friendly prices, pairing their food menu with the drinks menu too.
